Mental Health Review Tribunals in practice

DEAR SIRS
It has been drawn to my attention that the references for my paper (Psychiatric Bulletin, June 1993, 17, 331–336) contain two errors and an omission.

(a) There is a third edition of Richard Jones' Mental Health Act Manual published in 1991.
(b) The reference to the 'Mental Health Act Manual', DOH, should read 'Mental Health Act 1983, Memorandum on Parts I to VI, VIII and X', Department of Health. London: HMSO.
(c) Mental Health: Tribunal Procedure (1992) L. Gostin & P. Fennell, Longmans.

DEAR SIRS
Gordon Langley has provided a valuable service to Tribunal members and non-members alike in his paper on 'Mental Health Review Tribunal practice' (Psychiatric Bulletin, June 1993, 17, 331–336). In addition to the references he quotes, new Tribunal members are provided (among other material) with A Guide For Members produced by a small group of us in 1988. In addition, both new and experienced members will find Larry Gostin's and Phil Fennell's Mental Health: Tribunal Procedure (second ed, Longman, 1992) a most useful aid to practice. (See David Tidmarsh's review of it in the June issue of the Journal, p. 860).

Hypnosis in psychiatry

DEAR SIRS
Dr Mathew on 'Hypnosis in Psychiatry' (Psychiatric Bulletin, April 1993, 17, 202–204) concludes that "Hypnotherapy should be considered as a supportive and supplementary therapy and not as a substitute form of therapy to treat the untreatable." What exactly does he mean? A “substitute” for what? And, how can the “untreatable” be “treated”?

There are numerous examples of hypnosis as a treatment in its own right as distinct from being merely "supportive" or "supplementary", as in severe refractory irritable bowel syndrome (Whorwell et al, 1984, 1987) and infertility without any organic basis (Mackett, 1985). I recently treated two cases in which AID had been attempted unsuccessfully over a prolonged period. The patients were referred by a consultant in infertility. Both became pregnant within months.

I agree with the author that psychiatric patients should not consult those with no medical qualifications and no formal training in psychiatry. But why pick on the practice of hypnosis in this connection? For similar reasons, I have never been in favour of the direct referral of psychiatric problems to clinical psychologists.

Mathew concludes that hypnosis is valuable in liaison psychiatry where specialists have not discovered any organic abnormality. This may or may not be true, but diagnosis (and therefore therapy) should be based on positive grounds, not merely on
